KEMAL BAKARSIC is Associate Professor of Comparative Literature and Library Science in the Faculty of Philosophy, University of Sarajevo. He is the author of dozens of articles on archival collections, information technology, and the cultural history of Bosnia. From 1993 to 1996 he served as Deputy Minister in the Ministry for Education, Science, Culture, and Sport of the Government of the Republic / Federation of Bosnia-Hercegovina. From 1986 to 1993 he was Chief Librarian at the National Museum of Bosnia-Hercegovina (Zemaljski muzej), in Sarajevo. Dr. Bakarsic has carried out extensive research on the Jewish communities of Bosnia and Herzegovina, and on the Sarajevo Haggadah.

MIEKE BAL is Professor of Theory of Literature, University of Amsterdam. She is the recipient of numerous honours and awards, and most recently served as Getty Visiting Scholar, The Getty Research Institute for the History of Art and the Humanities, Los Angeles (2001-2002); Clark Visiting Fellow, Sterling and Francine Clark Art Institute, Williamstown, Massachusetts (2001); and Visiting Professor of Cultural Analysis to the AHRB Centre for Cultural Analysis, Theory and History in the School of Fine Art, Art History and Cultural Analysis, Leeds University, U.K. (2000-2003). She is the author most recently, of Travelling Concepts in the Humanities: A Rough Guide (University of Toronto Press, 2002); Mieke Bal Kulturanalyse (eds. Thomas Fechner-Smarsly and Sonja Neef; Suhrkamp, 2002); Louise Bourgeois’ Spider: The Architecture of Art-writing (University of Chicago Press, 2001); and Quoting Caravaggio: Contemporary Art, Preposterous History (University of Chicago Press 1999).

ELIZABETH CROOKE is a Lecturer in Museum and Heritage Studies at the Academy for Irish Cultural Heritages of Ulster, University of Ulster, Magee Campus. She obtained her PhD in 1999 from Cambridge University. Her current research interests include the history of collection and museum development in Ireland and the role of museums in fostering understanding in divided societies. She is the author of “Museums, Communities, and the Politics of Heritage in Northern Ireland,” in J. Littler and R. Naidoo, eds., The Politics of Heritage: Race, Identity and National Stories (Routledge, in press); “Diversity issues in relation to museums in Ireland, north and south,” Museums Ireland (2003); “Conflict resolution and museums,” Museums Journal, (2002) 102(8), 25-27; “Troubling social inclusion in Northern Ireland’s museums,” Including Museums (RCMG Leicester, 2001).

REESA GREENBERG is an Adjunct Professor at Concordia University and York University. She has consulted on exhibitions and installation for the Art Gallery of Ontario, the Edmonton Art Gallery, the Jewish Museum in New York and the Jewish Museum in Amsterdam. Her publications include: “Playing it Safe: The Display of Transgressive Art in the Museum” in Mirroring Evil: Nazi Imagery, Recent Art (Rutgers Univ. Press, 2001); The Rhetoric of Arrangement: Seeing is Believing (Musée d’Art Contemporain, Montreal, 1996); Thinking About Exhibitions (co-edited with Bruce Ferguson and Sandy Nairne, Routledge, 1996); The Exhibition as Discursive Event (Site Santa Fe, 1995). She is currently writing a book on Private Collectors, Museums, Display: a Post-Holocaust Perspective, to be published by Stanford University Press.

ROBIN OSTOW is a Resident Fellow at the Centre for Russian and East European Studies, University of Toronto, and Assistant Professor in the Department of Sociology and Anthropology, Wilfrid Laurier University. She has written extensively on Jews and Jewish culture in both Cold War Germanies and in post-unification Germany. Her publications include: “Imagined Families and ‘Rassenschande’: Germans and Russians, Nation and Gender at the Ravensbruck Memorial,” Journal of European Area Studies (2001) and Jews in Contemporary East Germany: The Children of Moses in the Land of Marx (Macmillan, 1988). She is currently guest-editing a special thematic issue of the Journal of East European Jewish Affairs (on Post-Soviet Jewish Immigration to Germany, to appear in January 2004), and she is completing an ethnographic study of Jewish museums in Europe.

RUTH B. PHILLIPS is Canada Research Chair in Modern Culture, and Professor of Art History, Carleton University. From 1997 until 2003 she was Director of the Museum of Anthropology at the University of British Columbia. Among her publications are (with Christopher B. Steiner), Unpacking Culture: Arts and Commodities in Colonial and Postcolonial Worlds (University of California Press, 1999); Trading Identities: The Souvenir in Native North American Art from the Northeast, 1700-1900 (University of Washington Press, 1998); and (with Janet Catherine Berlo), Native North American Art (Oxford University Press, 1998). She is currently working on Museum Pieces: Exhibiting Native Art in Canadian Museums 1967-2002.

ISTVAN REV is Professor of History and Political Science, Central European University (Budapest), and Director, Open Society Archives. His research interests are in displaying history, death and mourning, and archives, classification and retrieval techniques. He is the author of “Covering History” in M. Roth and C. Salas, eds., Disturbing Remains: Memory, History and Crisis in the Twentieth Century ( Getty Research Institute, 2001). He is currently completing a book for Stanford University Press on retroactive justice.

JOLENE RICKARD is Associate Professor in the Departments of Art and Art History at the State University of New York in Buffalo, and a guest curator for the Smithsonian - National Museum of the American Indian. Rickard’s work has been exhibited at the Canadian Museum of Civilization, Hood Museum of Art, Albright-Knox Art Gallery, Heard Museum and Gallery of the American Indian Community House, NYC, among others. Her most recent curatorial project, Across Borders: Beadwork in Iroquois Life, was on view at Toronto’s Royal Ontario Museum in 2002. A member of the Tuscarora Turtle Clan, Rickard holds a BFA and BAA from the Rochester Institute of Technology, an MSc from Buffalo State College, and a PhD in American Studies from SUNY.

DAVID-THIERY RUDDEL is Director of the Museum Studies Program at the University of Toronto. He was educated at the University of British Columbia, Princeton University, and Laval University where he received a PhD in History. He has worked at the Institut québécois de recherche sur la culture, Canadian Museum of Civilization and at the National Museum of Science and Technology. He has organized or collaborated on numerous museum exhibits and special events, published extensively in English and French and lectured at universities and conferences in North America and Europe.

JAMES E. YOUNG is Professor of English and Judaic Studies at the University of Massachusetts Amherst, where he has taught since 1988, and currently Chair of the Department of Judaic and Near Eastern Studies. He has also taught at New York University as a Dorot Professor of English and Hebrew/Judaic Studies (1984-88), at Bryn Mawr College in the History of Religion, and at the University of Washington, Harvard University, and Princeton University as a visiting professor. He received his Ph.D. from the University of California in 1983. Professor Young is the author of At Memory's Edge: After-images of the Holocaust in Contemporary Art and Architecture (Yale University Press, 2000), The Texture of Memory (Yale University Press, 1993), and Writing and Rewriting the Holocaust (Indiana University Press, 1988), as well as numerous articles and reviews. He was also the Guest Curator of an exhibition at the Jewish Museum in New York City, entitled "The Art of Memory: Holocaust Memorials in History" (March - August 1994) and was the editor of The Art of Memory (Prestel Verlag, 1994), the exhibition catalogue for this show. In 1997, Professor Young was appointed by the Berlin Senate to the five-member Findungskommission for Germany's national "Memorial to Europe's Murdered Jews," now under construction in Berlin. Professor Young is the recipient of numerous awards and fellowships, including a Guggenheim Fellowship, ACLS Fellowship, NEH Exhibition planning, implementation, and research grants, Memorial Foundation for Jewish Culture Grants, an American Philosophical Society Grant, and a Yad Hanadiv Fellowship at the Hebrew University in Jerusalem, among others.

Conference information: www.chass.utoronto.ca/jiges